Portfolio Manager Commentary

Overall, the asset continued to perform well for a second year in a row with the valuation up £1m YoY given the share class a total return of 13.5% for the year. Given the strong covenant strength of the tenant, all rents were paid on time and in full. Holders of shares received their monthly distributions of $0.58 per share, equivalent to an annualized yield of 7% of issue price.^{1,2}

The asset had a strong valuation uplift in Q1 22 but fell sharply in Q3 22 due to cap rates moving outwards as a result of the Bank of England's ("BoE") rate hikes from 75bps to 350bps to tackle the high inflationary environment. Yields across all sectors increased due to low investment activity and high cost of financing.³

In March 2022, the rent of the property increased by over 16% and we expect to capture further upside at the next rent review in March 2027 given the current inflationary environment. The share class is partially hedged to take advantage of the pound appreciating.^{1,2}

Tesco PLC remains in a financially strong position with Bloomberg consensus expecting an increase of sales of +2.5% for the financial year. Moody's, Standard & Poor's and Fitch continue to assign an investment grade covenant strength to Tesco PLC with a stable outlook.

With the BoE looking to further hike rates in 2023 to rapidly tackle inflation, we could see further devaluation of assets in the short term, however, long term basis the outlook of this investment remains positive supported by the strong demand for the asset class and persistent inflationary environment benefiting properties with inflation linked leases such as this. Stores will become even more important as logistic costs continue to soar; occupiers are directing consumers back to stores to increase efficiencies.^{1,2}

Distribution policy and capital depletion

The share class aims to make regular distributions at a pre-announced rate reviewed on a quarterly basis by the Directors of the Fund. Distribution rates are set on the basis of the average anticipated total return of the share class, are funded by available cash and can exceed the income of the underlying investment. In the event that the rate of distributions falls short of the total return achieved during a given period, the share price will decline by an amount corresponding to the shortfall leading to capital depletion.
